BCOA 2024 Obedience Rankings

for BCOA member-owned Borzoi, January 1 to March 31, 2024

Corrections to Dean Eelman, dkeelman@att.net

To be included in the report, the first person listed as the dog's owner by the AKC must be a BCOA member. To be ranked in the Top 5 dog list at the end of the year, a dog must have at least 3 Qualifying Scores from any Obedience class. Scores for each class will be multiplied by a factor based on level of class difficulty and all Qualifying Scores will be averaged for that dog. The factors are as follows: Beginner Novice – 0.8; Preferred Novice – 0.9; Novice – 1.0; Graduate Novice – 1.1; Preferred Open – 1.2; Open – 1.3; Versatility – 1.3; Graduate Open – 1.35; Preferred Utility – 1.4; and Utility – 1.5. Only 1 score is needed to be ranked #1 in any particular class at year's end.

The Summer and Fall Aristocrat report will consist of a list for each of the all Obedience classes with qualifying entries with the dogs' name in alphabetical order and their real average score. In the Winter and following year's Spring edition, each Obedience class will list the dogs in weighted average score order. In addition, the Winter and following year's Spring Aristocrat editions will list the top 5 dogs in weighted order for those dogs having 3 Qualifying Scores in any class or classes.

Judge's Critique

One of my favorite show weekends has always been the Bucks and Trenton weekend, mainly because of the strong hound competition in the Northeast. This year there was depth of quality and a strong cross-section of styles at the Borzoi Club of Greater New York specialty. It was interesting to note that this entry had imports from Scandinavia, Switzerland, Canada and exhibits from the west to east coasts; a true geographic cross-section. The dog class winners came down to Zaprof's Illumination, a mature dog with good substance and balanced sidegait. The front assembly was well put together and a pleasing head. Reserve was Akanni Dunroving Check It Out, a balanced young dog appearing more mature than his age. This is a dog to watch in the months ahead. The bitch classes had several strong contenders, with Foxfire A Song For the Telling taking winners bitch on her good breadth of chest and well-developed pro sternum. On the stack, the handler emphasized her lovely outline. Reserve was Maskova's Whispering Rose. Lovely conformation but was out moved on the day by the winners bitch.

Both the veteran dog and bitch winners could have passed for much younger Borzoi. The bitch went on to an Award of Merit and the dog was my eventual Best of Opposite.

Best Veteran and BOS was a dog that could easily compete with the younger specials. GCHG Korsakov's Wild Sweet Love at White Sage had a lovely silhouette both standing and moving. Would have preferred a little more substance through the chest but the rest of the package went well together as a whole. Veteran Bitch GCH DC Wildhunt Quantum Singularity of Ryhka was beautiful type and had a long, lean head. I would prefer a little less attention on the ear set. Select dog was an impressive picture with a matching head. I was not surprised to see this dog was Swiss-bred, as he reminded me of some the best that I saw when I judged in Europe. Select bitch GCH DC BelVento Sunrise SC was a type reminiscent of some of the lovely bitches we had in the 80s. While color is immaterial, her rich red and white was very attractive. She was shown to perfection by her handler. Both awards of merit were competitive and showed well and I was happy to have the quality in the ring to choose from.

My best of breed won on both movement and structure. The breed is suffering from lack of pro sternum and width of forechest, as well as a tendency for shorter upper arms. GChB Justart American Dynasty, my best of breed winner, had a well laid-back shoulder, a good length of upper arm, and enough width for both depth and breadth of chest. On both the down and back and go around she was sound and had balanced foot timing.

On the downside a trend I have noticed was missing teeth. We had been making improvements on this fault but it now seems to be back and is a disappointment. While I did not make any placement decisions on missing teeth, there were more than a few and this needs to be considered in choosing breeding stock. Another issue was lack of underjaw both width and depth. Several of the exhibits, while having beautiful type, had canines where the lower actually was inside the uppers and interfered with the roof of the mouth. I have noticed this problem and the frequency has given me cause for concern. Not only is it incorrect but painful for the dog.

In general, the entry was lovely and both dogs and bitches had beautiful type with small ears, oval eyes, full pigment and good coats. Judging the BCGNY specialty was a wonderful experience and thanks to the members of the club for putting on a great show. §

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

submitted by Gwen Post

The enclosed article appeared in Country Life in America in October of 1916. The dark dog is probably Zyclon of Perchino. I have gone through the stud book and there is not an imported Russian dog named Cyclone. This also matches a labeled photo that I have Zyclon.

Charles Livingston did a lot of Borzoi illustrations. His later ones being much better than his earlier ones. This article uses one of his that I especially like, as it is where I got the idea for the BCOA Colorado Specialty medal of 1987.

I think you will find this article interesting.

MY FRIEND Charles Livingston Bull, the animal artist, is, as the boys say, "nutty" over the Russian wolfhound, and it is to him that I owe largely my appreciation of that breed. At the Westminster show he delights in pointing out to me the wonderful beauty of the Borzoi's lines, and I have come at last to view the matter somewhat with his eyes. I suppose it is natural for us to like some breeds better than others, and I confess that I never warmed up very much to this Russian, but I can see now how the Borzoi must appeal to an artist, and I am quite willing to admit that he has other good points as well. Leaving out all question of personal preference, therefore, let us see why this breed has become so popular.

In the first place, the Borzoi is perhaps the most spectacular of all dogs in appearance, and that goes a long way with many fanciers and dog owners. He never can fail to attract attention in the show or on the street, or when sailing over fences in the open country. When running he is an epic of motion.

Major Borman, one of the breed's best friends in England, says: "The most graceful and elegant of all breeds, combining symmetry with strength, the wearer of a lovely silky coat that a toy dog might envy, the length of head, possessed by no other breed—all go to make the Borzoi the favorite he has become." Major Borman knows the breed; we will let his estimate stand.

The Borzoi, or Russian wolfhound as he is more often called in the United States, is a dog of ancient lineage, akin to the long-coated Persian greyhound and belonging to the greyhound family. For centuries, probably, he has been bred in Russia as the sporting dog of the aristocracy. The rest of Europe has known him for only a few decades.

It was perhaps forty years ago that the first Borzois were imported into England. The Czar presented dogs to the royal family of England, so that his position in English society was assured from the start. English fanciers took up the breed about 1880, and the Borzoi Club was founded in England in 1892. The English, however, made more of a companion than a hunting dog of him, wolves being less plentiful in Great

THE HOUND OF THE CZARS

Britain than in Russia, so that our English importations have differed somewhat in character from those brought direct from Russia.

The first Borzois were brought to this country in the early '90's, and were called Siberian wolfhounds. Later we adopted the name Russian wolfhound. Interest here was spasmodic until Mr. J. B. Thomas, Jr., took hold. He bought dogs in England, Canada, and the United States, and then imported some fine dogs from Russia, including the famous Bistri of Perchina and Sorva. Bistri was a typical example of the breed and his stuffed remains are preserved at the Museum of Natural History in New York. Mr. Thomas's continued enthusiasm has had much to do with the ever increasing popularity of the breed in this country. We now have plenty of good breeding material here, with several large kennels doing a good business, and the future of the breed seems assured. Borzois are becoming more and more common among dog owners in all parts of the country, and the show entries are always large. There were thirty-four of them at Madison Square Garden last February.

Grace, speed, strength, and beauty are the Borzoi's physical characteristics—if you concede the attribute of beauty to so narrow a head. The Standard calls for a dog built on greyhound lines, but taller and somewhat leaner than the greyhound. The greyhound's action is quicker than that of the Borzoi, but the latter is a stronger runner, with a longer stride and greater staying powers.

The Borzoi's chest should be deep and narrow, the body muscular, neck, back, and loins bespeaking strength, with the back arched over the loins. Both fore and hind quarters should be powerful, the thighs well muscled, hind quarters somewhat straighter than those of the greyhound, hind legs well set forward and well bent at the hocks.

The Borzoi's head counts fifteen points in the judging. The skull should be longer and narrower than that of the greyhound, and there is usually an angle at the brow, producing a Roman nose. The eyes are dark and set somewhat obliquely. The ears are small, thin, and carried down.

The coat is long, fine, and silky, sometimes with Cyclone, one of Mr. Thomas's Russian importations. This dog is said to be responsible for some of the best breeding in the country

Radloff o' Valley Farm, a solid white dog of wonderful coat, standing 31 inches at the shoulder. He is a grandson of Ch. Bistri of Perchina. Owned by Mr. D. C. Davis a curl. White usually predominates in the coloring, which may be all white or with markings of tan, fawn, blue-gray, brindle, lemon, or black. Whole colored specimens of these tints sometimes appear.

The Standard calls for a dog 28 to 31 inches high at the shoulder. In England the minimum has been raised to 29 inches. The average weight is 75 to 105 pounds, bitches 15 to 20 pounds lighter. A desirable height is 31 inches; some dogs have stood 33 inches or more.

Common faults in the Borzoi are shoulders too heavy, chest too wide, turned-out elbows, splay feet, cow hocks, head too short or thick, light eyes, and lightness of bone.

The Russians are good breeders, as a rule, and the puppies are not difficult to rear if proper care is taken. Fairly high prices are the rule, prize winners being valued up into the thousands occasionally. Good puppies, eight or ten weeks old, may be had for $35 to $50. The Borzoi is at his prime when three or four years of age.

Being a somewhat nervous, restless breed, more than ordinary care should be exercised in training the puppy. He should be broken early, if possible, of a tendency to run away or roam, for the Borzoi is naturally a great ranger and wants to use his legs. The puppy should be accustomed to the collar and lead when quite young. It is better, however, not to try to keep one on a chain. A good sized fenced-in run is better, and the fence needs to be pretty high. The breed does not take kindly to close confinement, and some individuals can never be made into house dogs. In the main, variety of diet, plenty of exercise, and patience in training are the requisites in rearing a puppy.

There appears to be some difference of opinion as to the Borzoi's disposition. The breed's staunchest friends claim that he is naturally affectionate, and a one-man dog. He seldom picks a quarrel. I am inclined to think that individuals differ rather widely, some being sweet-tempered and some not. Perhaps they have been spoiled by their aristocratic training. They are often snobbish, sometimes wilful.

I knew a Borzoi once that did no end of damage by breaking loose occasionally and running wild. In almost every instance the owner heard of chickens killed or some other damage done, sometimes ten miles from home. This Borzoi seemed unable to resist the call of the wild when it came, though between times she was docile and affectionate. It was bred in her to run and kill.

Mr. Bull owned one once that never did become civilized. "She was extremely beautiful," he told me, "extremely strong-willed. There was always a contest whenever I wanted her to do something she did not care to do. She was fairly intelligent and could learn the meaning of almost anything, but she would obey only when she felt like it. She was very playful and loved a good romp. She was quick as a flash and sensitive to a harsh word.

"She was about a year old when we got her and had never been handled at all. She had been brought up in a big kennel, the runt of the family, and had to fight for whatever she got to eat. And the first time she was handled the kennel man tried to give her a bath and let her escape by backing out of her collar. It was her first bath, first collar, and first handling, and was a bad start, especially as the man lost his temper and whipped her for what she did not know.

"I have faith," he added, "that if I could get a little puppy and bring him up by hand, I might have a different story to tell."

Mr. Bull's dog never did learn the true meaning of human comradeship. She had been spoiled at the outset. No collar, harness, or chain could hold her, and at last she had to be disposed of.

I tell this story not to depreciate the breed, but to discourage any one from buying a Borzoi whose good training in early youth cannot be vouched for. The breed is sensitive and the character may be easily ruined, and it is far too fine a breed to be spoiled by careless handling or inexperienced training.

I believe it all comes down to that, and that most of the arguments that can be mustered against the breed are due to lack of human wisdom rather than canine depravity. There are enough instances of Borzois who have turned out well to prove that this is so, and I believe that a Borzoi puppy, taken young, may be made into as trustworthy a companion as a St. Bernard or Great Dane, as well as the most striking ornament the owner can add to his estate.

Most of these tendencies to wrong doing, indeed, may be traced directly to the fact that bred deep in the blood and bone of the Borzoi is the instinct of the wolf hunter of the broad steppes, and that is a noble calling. In Russia the Borzoi has for centuries been used for this purpose. He can not only run down the fleetest wolf, but kill his quarry as well. This seems almost impossible when you look at the slender jaws, but the powerful neck and shoulders have to be reckoned with. The wolf runs a straightaway course, with no doubling, but he is no match in speed for the Borzoi. The dog's method is to come upon him from behind, seize him back of the ears, and with a lightning-like twist, break the wolf's neck.

In Russia, however, the Borzoi is usually trained to capture, not to kill the quarry. When a wolf is started, a pair of Borzois are unleashed. Side by side they race after their prey, overtaking him one on each side. Suddenly, often simultaneously, they pin him back of the ears, and hold him until the huntsman comes up to deliver the coup de grace, or to muzzle the beast and take him alive. Can you blame a dog, with the spirit of such a chase in his blood, for being a bit restless at the end of a chain, or imprisoned in a suburban back yard?

It must be admitted that for sheer beauty of lines the Russian wolfhound stands preëminent. Although this is an ideal sketch, Mr. Bull has not allowed his pencil to flatter the breed

The Borzoi runs by sight only, not by scent. He is nimble enough to catch a jack rabbit or a fox, and powerful enough to kill the big gray timber wolf. In the West, Borzois have for some time been used with great success for hunting and killing coyotes, and there are indications that they are to be employed even more extensively for this purpose in the near future. ## Judge's Critique

Thank you for inviting me to judge the entrants of the BCDV specialty on May 3, 2024. The entry was full of quality and much appreciated. Judging is a pleasure with so many lovely choices.

My Best of Breed choice was GCH Envious As We Fall. This dog is more moderate than I usually prefer but he was very balanced, good outline, pretty head and possessed a correct, effortless gait in every direction, showing a true elegance and style. He was masculine without coarseness and, as they say, asked for the win.

My Best of Opposite Sex choice was GCH, DC BelVento Sunrise. This shapely red and white bitch won my heart with her lovely expression, small high-set ears, sound, effortless movement and true Borzoi femininity, beautifully balanced in every way.

Winners Dog and Best of Winners was Ferlinka In The Mood, who I understand finished his championship with this win. This is a style of Borzoi that I like very much, shapely without exaggeration and sound all around. He gave it his all on the day and earned his wins.

Reserve Winners Dog was Zaprof's Illumination. Very stylish and sound dog, shown to perfection on the day.

Winners Bitch was Ferlinka Moonlight Serenade, as it turns out, littermate to WD. She was the feminine version of her brother. Both of these Borzoi were just right on the day, displaying the best of Borzoi Male/Female qualities so important in our breed. She was a pleasure to watch on the move and posing as only a Borzoi bitch can do.

Reserve Winners Bitch was Dunroving Bette Midler Melockoff, a promising youngster in full puppy bloom. We will certainly be seeing more of her.

Thank you to the committee for your kindness and help during my stay; to my fantastic ring steward, who made my time in the ring so easy; and to the exhibitors who brought their Borzoi for me to admire, judge and love. You need to know how happy they made me, even the naughty ones.

Barbara Binder, Borzoi del Viento
